Advanced Decomp Saturation, Sampling, and Krippendorff Alpha A: R has a built-in function called `strptime` which can convert string into date format. `strptime(df1$date, '%m/%d/%Y %H:%M:%S')` You can put other formats as well. In case you want to convert it to date format with specific format, use `as.Date`. `as.Date(strptime(df1$date, '%m/%d/%Y %H:%M:%S'), format = '%m/%d/%Y %H:%M:%S')` Below are some other formatting options to make date easier to read.

`as.POSIXct(strptime(df1$date, '%m/%d/%Y %H:%M:%S'), format = '%m/%d/%Y %H:%M:%S')` `datetime::strptime(df1$date, format = '%m/%d/%Y %H:%M:%S')` `format(as.POSIXct(strptime(df1$date, format = '%m/%d/%Y %H:%M:%S'), format = '%m/%d/%Y %H:%M:%S'), format = '%d/%m/%Y')` To get day of week as numeric instead of character you can use `as.POSIXct(strptime(df1$date, format = '%m/%d/%Y %H:%M:%S'), format = '%d-%m-%Y')` If you have multiple row of data, and all rows have same date format then you can put that to a list and convert the list to data.frame. df$date Police are searching for two suspects believed to be responsible for shooting and injuring a senior citizen on Wednesday in Pico Rivera.
